Improving Outcomes in an Era of Health Care Reform: The Need for Addressing Health Disparities

Thursday, June 30

2 p.m. – 3:30 p.m. Eastern (11 p.m. – 12:30 p.m. Pacific, Noon – 1:30 p.m. Mountain, 1 p.m. – 2:30 p.m. Central)

A webinar featuring:

Arthur C. Evans, Jr., Ph.D., commissioner of the Department of Behavioral Health and Intellectual Disability Services, Philadelphia

Vivian H. Jackson, Ph.D., ACSW, LICSW, senior policy associate, research faculty, National Center for Cultural Competence, Center for Child and Human Development, Georgetown University

A major thrust of health care reform is its emphasis on clinical outcomes. As behavioral health providers and systems administrators grapple with the challenges this brings, reducing disparities based on geography, race and ethnicity, gender, and other known factors will be an important strategy for achieving this goal.

At the end of this webinar, participants will be able to:

- Describe how reducing and eliminating health disparities is connected to improved clinical outcomes
- List five types of disparities in behavioral health care
- Describe the difference between individual and organizational cultural competence
- Describe the links between cultural and linguistic competence, quality care, and addressing disparities
- Develop an action to take within their own organization to improve cultural and linguistic competence

Who should attend this webinar?

- Behavioral Health Providers, including Peer Specialists
- Systems Administrators
- Others who are interested in this topic
